

I believe in NPR, National Public Radio as a really representative media. NPR to me broadcasts all sides of most issues. NPR also exhibits a variety of program sources and as one travels, one can sample that variety. I also believe that allowing commercial radio companies to accumulate many radio stations will make all of their broadcasts alike in the interests of their bottom line and the particular axes they have to grind. I also find very aggravating the fact that every little community seems to be broadcasting on relatively low power levels, all on or near the same frequency, so that a traveller or a listener in between those communities cannot hear a consistent broadcast.
